Thanks Joe,

With Rick's weekend wins and Greg missing the event, Rick clinched first for the NorCal 944-SPEC championships. Congratulations Rick!

With only four countable races left, it's now a fight for second and third between Jerry, Sid and Greg.

Ken you are correct.

The way it works out is a little complex, but Rick has 370 points in 4 Races of "drops" at this point in the season. 1 first and 3 2nds.

This means that in the remaining 4 races Rick will earn these back at least this many points irrespective of his finishes. He could get a maximum of 400 with 4 wins, but will get at least 370.

Greg can score a maximum of 400 points in the 4 remaining races. Thus he can gain back at most 30 points over Rick. As it stands right now with drops considered he is 40 points back.

So yes Rick has won the championship. Nice job Rick.

The rest of the places in championship are open as while Greg does have a lead, Jerry has 300 points in drops that he can use and could leap frog all the drives ahead of him in points should they run into trouble in the remaining races or miss events.

Hmmm. I guess the best strategy is to go and race the first 12 races and get it out of the way and sit back and watch as the points race begins and if needed, run an additional race or two and try to get a higher finish so you can edge the other guy out. :ohmy: :P

I know I will race at least 1 more weekend but it all depends upon where I finish and how many points I get that will determine if I need to race the last weekend.

Jerry, I am not going to let you win that easily. ;)
