just reviewing my videos from utah last year, decided to publish...

NASA Nationals 2009 944 SPEC Thursday Quali Race

I qualified 12th due to a problem but managed to basically hold station through this race.

NASA Nationals 2009 944 SPEC Friday Quali Race

vimeo.com/13668197

This one had a fun start, i started 6th behind Foxx, managed to bump draft and help him forward a bit. I ended up 6th though anyway after the start. One little mistake on lap 2 and i was back to 7th, the 14 year old passed me! Then a bigger mistake later on and the finishing position was not impressive. Don't make mistakes!

Nice videos!

That Friday race was pretty intense. Lost of cars bunched up and with the high average speeds one mistake becomes costly. Getting on to the straight heading for the attitude you lost like 5 spots by going off in the dirt. Crazy stuff. Your off in the 3rd attitude reminded me of 2008 when I went off there on crap tires and you drove past me for 3rd on the last lap. That really stings!

I will say that I got luck in that race. Not a great start pushed me back to 10th or 11th. Then I got 3 cars on the last lap and a 1/2 due to mistakes. Fun thing is however the competition was so strong that even racing for 10th was a lot of work. At top 10 at nationals last year was really success for anyone. I suspect it will be more of this same this year. While I personally would love to make the podium I just want to have nice racing battle and come back with a clean car. A good race is a good race for 10th or 1st.
